

Simon Brundage President

Simon Brundage is a third-year student studying Radiation Health Physics with an option in pre-law at Oregon State University. Simon is dedicated to advancing equality in treatment and equity in opportunity for all students.

Presently, he serves as the Vice President of Development of the College of Engineering Student Council (ESC), Vice President of the College Democrats at Oregon State University, a Student Ambassador for the Honors College, and as a Resident Assistant for West Hall. In these capacities, Simon has been involved in organizing numerous campus events—all with devoted interest in transparency, efficiency, and a student-first approach.

Formerly, Simon worked as the Vice President of Outreach and Events for the ESC, a START Orientation Leader for New Student Programs & Family Outreach, and as a undergraduate representative and projects committee member for ASOSU. Outside of OSU, Simon has served as a legislative intern in the United States Senate, working in an Oregon Senator's office on health & education policy. He has also been an avid volunteer in organizations such as the Campus Election Engagement Project and Habitat for Humanity.

Simon's understanding of policymaking and student advocacy would bring experienced, innovative leadership to ASOSU. As President, he hopes to focus legislative priorities on fiscal responsibility and campus infrastructure.
