Think of a triangle. What do you imagine of when you think of a triangle?

Probably 3 corners. Probably 3 sides. Maybe a small, medium, or large sized center, surrounded by those three sides and those three corners.

Doesn’t sound very convincing as a political platform does it?

But where a triangle has 3 corners—well—I have 3 steps.

1. Advocate
2. Advance
3. Achieve

And, where a triangle has three sides, I hear the sides of everyone willing to offer their voices. And, when there are those who wish to speak but can’t, I am there to help fill in the rest.

As your next Senator, I would not only strive to advocate, advance, and achieve great things, but I would do it all for the students of OSU.

I would ADVOCATE for the voices of our students.

I would ADVANCE those voices in the Senate, take stands, but listen to other sides.

And I would ACHIEVE all of this through the help of the student voices and would create an even better Oregon State University.

Oregon State University is about community. It’s about growing, changing, creating, venturing and, above all, learning. My goal as the next Senator of ASOSU is to help facilitate that community and to help fight for the causes that directly affect the students. Through ASOSU, I will be able to advocate for lower tuition costs, for lower book prices, for the best education that we as students deserve to have.

Because by both advocating and advancing, I know that we can achieve great things.
